Through this charter, the representatives of the Order of Santiago take possession of the village of Sagra and its inhabitants take an oath of fealty to them as their new lords. The context is an exchange of lordship between the Order of Santiago, which received the villages of Çenet and Sagra, and Pedro de Villanueva, who received the village of Agna. Through this charter, Muslims living in Sagra acknowledge and promise to fulfil their obligations, monetary and otherwise, to their new lords. As such, this constitutes an example of the process through which Muslims entered relations of coercion and dependence with military orders in the Middle Ages.

and friars, and thirteen good men of the aforesaid Order, in exchange for that of Agna, which was near the town of Xátiva. A public letter of this act was made by Alffonso Gonçales, notary of the Master, and it was granted in the royal camp over Alcalá de Aben Çayde, on Saturday, on the 14th of July, in the year of the Hispanic Era 1379, and was sealed with the seals of the said Master, priors, commanders, friars, and thirteen good men of the said Order. According to that charter, sir Pedro de Villanueva, who held and possessed the said village, gave to the said representatives the palace and the houses of that village of Sagra with all their lands and possessions, and gave them the keys to those houses, and took their hands and led them inside the said palace and houses and nothing less. And at that point he ordered all the Moorish inhabitants from that village of Sagra, who were in the usual place, that they and their successors have the Master and the aforesaid Order, or whom they may choose, as their lords and lords of that village of Sagra from that moment onwards, to answer and satisfy to them each and every time each and every request for revenue, yield, and activity, and other rights of that village of Sagra and its territories, and that they follow the orders that the said Master and said Order make from now on. And then the said sir Pedro de Villanueva frees and exempts and delivers the said Moors and
